MONTGOMERY, Aug 7—Democratic claims everywhere warrant the statement that the Democrats have 3 to 1 majority. Many counties [illegible] Republican and Democrats in the legislature. Seven Congressional districts have gone Democratic, one Republican. Everything peaceful.

The Barnard Letter

ST LOUIS, Aug 8—The Globe-Democrat to-morrow, referring to the Barnard letter [illegible] Richard Wilson to-day, will say substantially that its references to McKee are false in every particular. It is infamously false in its statement that McKee ever referred directly or by innuendo to Gen Grant as personally cognizant of or interested in whisky frauds. It is false in its assertion that McKee ever attempted to make ex-Collector Ford, in the manner stated, and the use of the names of Benton, Blow and Walsh in the connection in which Barnard used them was a piece of presumption of which no other man but Barnard would have been guilty. It was not justified by the shadow of a fact.

The Suit against Tilden.

NEW YORK, Aug 8.—In the suit in equity begun some time ago by the St. Louis, Alton & Terre Haute Railroad Company against Chas Butler and others, in which Samuel J. Tilden is one of the defendants, a partial answer has been filed by counsel for Governor Tilden. The defendants deny that any of the bonds or stocks mentioned in the bill of complaint have been unlawfully retained by or divided among the defendants or issued or disposed of by them in violation of their duty as members of any purchasing committee or as members of the board of directors or in violation of any trust or confidence reposed in them or in any manner whatsoever, and they also deny that by any act or failure on their part liabilities or burdens of complainant have been unjustly or unnecessarily increased to the amount of more than one million dollars or to any amount whatever. The answer also shows that the commission was immensely benefited by the accession of Tilden and his friends to its control. The transactions in stock were individual acts and not those of trustees, and the amounts paid for legal services were for specific work done.

Gen Harrison Accepts

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug 8—Gen Ben Harrison to-night accepts the Republican nomination for Governor and states he will make the canvass a thorough and active one.

Railway Accident.

CINCINNATI, Aug 8.—Ten or twelve persons were injured by an accident on the short line railroad between Louisville and Cincinnati this evening.

The Kentucky Election.

LOUISVILLE, Aug 8—Specials to the Courier-Journal indicate Democratic gains almost everywhere in Kentucky. Lexington gave a Republican majority somewhat less than in previous elections.

LOUISVILLE, Aug 8—Henry Watterson was elected Senator to-day by an overwhelming majority.

Weather in New York.

NEW YORK, Aug 8—The thermometer yesterday was 96° in the shade. There was a shower in the afternoon which did not cool the atmosphere. The weather this morning is very warm, with prospects of a scorching day. Some sunstrokes, but only a few fatalities. O'Leary, the pedestrian, was overcome by the heat, but after resting and taking medicine causing him to vomit, he recovered again, taking sleep about midnight after accomplishing something like eighty hours.

Murder.

CHICAGO, Aug 8.—The murder of Francis Hanford, principal of the North side school, by Alex Sullivan, secretary of the board of public works, for traducing his (Sullivan's) wife in a letter to the board of education, creates the profoundest excitement here. The latter charged that Mrs Sullivan, who is a Catholic, had used improper influence with Mayor Colvin to get the appointment of her friend and to get Dean Doyle [illegible], also a Catholic, appointed superintendent of public schools, and that there was a corrupt ring in this city working for the expulsion of the bible from the schools, of which Mrs Sullivan was the ring leader. The charges were broad and uncompromising, and Sullivan, while attempting to get a retraction last night, became engaged in a scuffle which resulted in his shooting Hanford in the stomach, causing almost instant death. Sullivan formerly held a Government office in Santa Fe, New Mexico, and latterly has been connected with the Chicago Times, where he has been known as an inoffensive and respectable gentleman. Mrs Sullivan is a writer of much merit and has been connected with several papers here. Hanford was a gentleman highly connected and respected by every one who knew him.

Fear of Indian Trouble.

ST LOUIS, Aug 8—It is reported from Sweetwater, Texas, that some 3000 Indians camped on the north fork of Red river, near Fort Elliott, are preparing for the war path, and citizens of that vicinity fear a general massacre, as the troops have been sent to reinforce Crook. Orders have been given that Indians returning to Fort Reno for rations shall be disarmed.

Drowned

MAYSVILLE, N. Y., Aug 8—Jas Spicer and daughter and Jno Fillmore were drowned by the capsizing of a boat in Chautauqua Lake last evening.

Nominations to Congress.

CINCINNATI, Aug 8—The Republicans to-day nominated Judge Stanley Matthews of the Second district and Judge M. O. Force of the First District of Ohio candidates to Congress.

Proposed Constitutional Amendment

WASHINGTON, Aug [illegible]—[illegible] Sargent [illegible] There shall be maintained in each State and Territory a system of free common schools [illegible] Until 1890 [illegible] any school where [illegible] Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Frelinghuysen proposed [illegible] substitute [illegible] the following terms: "No State shall make any law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. No public property and no money raised by taxation in any State or Territory or District, or derived from public lands or other public source, shall be appropriated to any school, educational or other institution that is under the control of any religious sect or denomination, and no such appropriation shall be made to any religious sect or denomination to promote its interests, nor shall any public money, land or property be divided between religious sects or denominations."

The following is the substitute proposed by Senator Christiancy: "No State shall make any law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, nor shall Congress or any State raise by taxation or appropriate any money for the support of any religious church or sect, nor for the support of any theological school or seminary, or any school or seminary teaching peculiar religious doctrines or subject in any respect under the control or direction of any church, religious society, sect or denomination, and no special or denominational system of religion or religious belief shall, in the States or Territories or in the District of Columbia, or in any part or course of study or instruction in any school or institution of learning supported wholly or in part by taxation or by donation of any money or property by any State or Territory or by the United States."

The Cause of the Wrangle.

NEW YORK, Aug 8.—A Tribune's Washington special says of the House proceedings: A good disposition has been shown on either side of the House to take advantage of the other [illegible] in the matter of reporting the whole proceedings to-day [illegible]. A piece of gossip which is circulating this evening is to the effect that the wrangle had been previously arranged for between [illegible] and Hale in order to consume time and prevent a vote on the Bland silver bill or other political matter which some of the members desire to bring up, may possibly help explain the proceedings. It is said by members of the conference committee that in half an hour after the next meeting a decision may be reached, and that agreement on one point, the salary of the members of Congress [illegible] that the bill will be reported to both houses to-morrow, or that the committee will report that agreement is impossible. [illegible] the present appropriation lasts will expire on the 10th, and the President is represented from several quarters as saying that he would not sign any more bills extending the present appropriations.

Charges against Hendricks.

The Herald's Washington special says charges brought against Hendricks in a Western paper of being concerned as attorney or agent in lobbying a war claim through the War Department, and when unsuccessful there, in the Senate while he was a Senator, attract attention here, as it is founded on his letters and on evidence in the department and Senate. It is believed by some persons so serious as perhaps to cause the withdrawal of Hendricks from the Democratic ticket, as Orth was recently withdrawn from the Republican ticket, and curiously enough, for a similar reason. There are Democrats here who would not regard it as a great misfortune if Hendricks should be compelled to withdraw.

The Debt Payable in "Coin."

WASHINGTON, Aug 8—Attention has been directed to the declaration in Tilden's letter of acceptance that interest on the public debt is payable in [illegible] statutes have been carefully examined by Senators and Representatives, and no authority is found by them for any loan the principal or interest of which is payable exclusively in gold. Coin is the term used on all occasions.

Boutwell's Mississippi Report

WASHINGTON, Aug 7—The majority report of the Senate Mississippi investigating committee [illegible] The present legislature is an illegal body and not entitled to recognition by the United States government, though the President may recognize it for the sake of peace. Gov. Ames's resignation was illegally effected, and he is of right Governor. The State is in the control of a set of men whose purpose is to curtail the negroes' right of suffrage and secure the supremacy of white-line Democracy in violation of the Constitution of the State and the United States. The government owes the State a duty, and its power will be invoked and should be granted to put an end to this reign of anarchy and incident evils.

KALAMA LETTER

KALAMA PAST AND PRESENT—THE [illegible] PUYALLUP COAL MINES—DIVERS AND SUNDRY.

KALAMA, W. T., Aug 4, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

[illegible] when the city charter of this place was under discussion in the Washington Territory legislature, a member who happened to be in lighting at some [illegible] or other of its provisions, let forth his rhetoric by asking "What is Kalama? A hole in the ground where a steamboat can run over one-half and a mule can't climb the other." A month or more ago the general verdict here coincided with the view of the orator, but at present we are getting over our water scare and dream of future big things [illegible] coming Puget Sound terminus, of course, when our ship comes home from sea.

As Kalama City has settled down to bedrock, and now contains only those needed in railroad employment and other avocations subsidiary thereto, the surplus architecture that was called into existence during the flush times of railroad construction four or five years since is fast assuming a woebegone aspect and is getting no better fast. Nevertheless there is no solid reason for the better [illegible] inaugurated consequent upon the able administration of the Pacific division of the N P R R since General Sprague's powers of the superintendency have been enlarged under the new organization of the company, and if the fates should decree that construction cease henceforth on this line, Gen. Sprague's executive ability will make the Pacific division a success on its own isolated base of operations. The business of the line has regularly increased from year to year since its construction to the Sound four years ago, and 1877 will exhibit a ratio of business accretion in excess of either annual balance-sheet of its quadrennial experience. In the routine of his railroad administration Gen. Sprague's tact in judging of character and capacity has enabled him to surround himself with a staff of assistants in the several departments of his superintendency of the road operations that holds all details according to "heaven's first law—order." J. E. Curtis, formerly of the Central, is master mechanic; H. W. Fairweather, general ticket agent; H. C. Hale, locating engineer and roadmaster. One Sprague ticket agent is also receiving and forwarding clerk. There are no honorary dead heads on the pay roll of this line; every employe is the right man in the right place. The damage by flood to the line in this vicinity is about all repaired, and is of much less extent than at first reported. About thirty Chinamen are at present employed at graveling and riprapping between here and the Cowlitz, and will soon have every vestige of the flood obliterated, with the road bed better than before. The 25-mile branch from Tacoma to the Puyallup coal mines is now the absorbing topic from here to the Sound. [illegible] the powers that be. One unfortunate interviewer caught the skirts of the vice-president of the Railroad Company (Gen. Stark) as soon as he landed at Tacoma, who got rid of the nuisance by two or three sentences of "cold comfort," which found their way into print last week, and was supposed a squelcher on the enterprise; but we feel assured to say that what may be necessary to get rid of an intruder is not likely to be an emanation of the confidential data of an official whose reputation for sagacity implies that he reserves the conclusions drawn from his present mission to the Pacific Division till officially communicated to his board of directors in council. There is good reason to surmise from certain indications that the road will be commenced in a few weeks. The line is estimated to cost about $800,000 to put it in complete coal shipping condition. The company's board of directors sent out a coal expert to examine the coal region and its quality, with the vice president at his heels, and the extent and quality are reported as satisfactory. So putting that and that together, with known capital interested in the enterprise, it will be no alarm [illegible] there is much delay in this solid sure paying investment.

As an item worth mentioning we feel a little proud that we can boast of having a hotel here that in its appointments is fully the peer of any other hotel house north of San Francisco [illegible] traveling public.

THE LOCKS AND CANAL

ANOTHER WRITER ON THE ISSUE.

PORTLAND, Aug [illegible], 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

On a recent trip through the valley country I was not a little surprised at the excitement, not to say indignation, manifested over the sale of the canal and locks by the corporation which constructed them to their present owner, the W. V. & L. Co.

It is but natural that a question of so much importance as the opening up of the gateway of the Willamette valley should attract a great deal of attention. The building of the locks and the spirited competition on the river which ensued was vastly beneficial alike to the producers and consumers of the valley, however disastrous it may have been, and probably was, to the fortunes of those who built the locks and placed a line of steamboats on the river. The people do not like to lose the advantages they have been enjoying, and properly desire that something should be done which will insure their perpetuity.

There is danger, however, that passion and prejudice will cloud the reason and disturb the judgment of those who are trying to seek a remedy for the supposed evil. I have yet to learn that any boat has been refused a passage through the locks, yet those who are talking and writing on the subject assume that the locks are already closed, and heap abuse without stint on the former owners of those works for making the transfer. This is worse than idle, for it is foolish. The locks and canal were the property of the gentlemen who built them. After they were finished those gentlemen offered to sell them to the State, but the legislature declined to purchase. Then the property was offered and finally sold to the present owners. It is presumed that a man has a right to sell his property to whomsoever will give him his price for it, and the fact that he does so is no cause of complaint against him. The locks were sold and are now held subject to all the legal restrictions and provisions imposed by the act granting State aid for their construction. That being the case, where is the ground for complaint?

Again, I notice the executive of the State, as well as the W. V. & L. Co., is attacked for permitting a suit to be brought to annul the charter of the old company. I am not disposed to fight the governor's battles for him, but it certainly savors of demagogism to hold him responsible for an event over which he had no possible control. The fact seems to be that the old company had sold their property. By the law, they forfeited their charter for non-user, if for six months they ceased to perform the functions for which they were incorporated; but when they are disincorporated by judgment of court they retain their existence for five years for the purpose of closing out their business, and may sue and be sued during that time; hence it seems that what has been done in the premises was eminently proper and just.

The sooner all parties interested abandon irrational abuse, and, looking this transportation question squarely in the face, begin to cast about for a permanent remedy, the better will it be for the people. **

CUSTER AS A BOY.—The principal of one of the public schools of Ohio sends the following communication to the Dayton Journal: "At a time when the nation mourns the sad fate of its bravest defenders, allow me to relate a little incident in the life of the boy indicative of the reckless bravery of the man and General. I knew him well in his youth. He was a pupil of mine in 1857–8 at the McNeely Normal School, in Harrison county, Ohio. He was then a lad about sixteen or seventeen years old. We all learned to admire his wit, his dash and daring, and indeed to love him, notwithstanding his waywardness at times. He was often in mischief and squabbles in the neighborhood and school. But he never attempted to conceal the part he acted. He was the pink of honor. I never knew him to falsify. He was too brave to lie. He would not even attempt to palliate his guilt. When taken to task for misconduct he would usually say, 'I know it was wrong, but I could not help it.' 'Could not help it?' 'No, sir; I wanted to do it.' 'But could you not restrain your impulses?' 'Don't know, sir—never tried.' 'But don't you think you ought to try?' 'What if I could, but I don't feel like trying.' His logic was overwhelming—at least his teacher had to accept it as such. As illustrative of that impulsive bravery which has cost the country one of its most effective fighters, I relate from memory a little incident that occurred in the neighborhood of the school. He and his fellow students attended a country singing school one night. The young men of the neighborhood had probably heard of his championship in a fight, and, I suppose, wished to test his mettle, or perhaps rather to insult him in a situation where he could not defend himself. He was sitting near a closed window when a young man outside, slipping up beside the window and looking in, made a hideous face at him. The light fell on the distorted features but a moment. The next instant there was a crash—a [illegible] of pain. The window was badly spoiled—so was a bad face outside. A well directed blow from the boy Custer had done both."

SEASIDE SCENES.—The beach is like a burnished piece of silverware, and whoever walks upon it is seen inverted like a face card. The little crescent foot of yonder beauty is kissed by its own reflection, and we hardly know whether to prefer the shadow or the substance. The branching bare arms (like tusks of ivory) of yonder maid are folded above her head [illegible] in the mirror of the sands, and make the beach a gallery of marble statuary. A group of [illegible] with bare legs and ankles squat on the [illegible] shelf of Silex, and some are stretched out at full length, balanced on the tips of their violet toes, reaching for a sea shell. The naked children dance inverted like an ubiquitous Cupid [illegible] As far as the eye can see the [illegible] is a human fringe of bathers, hanging on to ropes, all clad in bedticking or flannel. Here is a [illegible] young woman [illegible] and suspect the perfection of that form. Alas! [illegible] the idea of corsets come like a [illegible] across our minds?

FARMING ITEMS.

Harvesting has now commenced in Calapooia in earnest. The warm weather is ripening the grain very fast, and the farmers are busy keeping up with their harvest. There has been considerable oats threshed near Oakland and shipped off, while there is a good demand. The yield is greater than last year, according to the number of acres harvested.

The Walla Walla Watchman says: On Monday last we were out through the finest wheat fields of the valley. Grain ready for the header met us on every side, while many fields were already cut and some threshed. We met a number of teams loaded with new wheat on their way to the city. On our return we passed a four hundred acre field of as fine wheat as ever stood out of doors. The owner considers it good for forty bushels to the acre.

The Seattle Intelligencer says: We had a talk with a gentleman lately from Wisconsin, now a settler on the Nooksack in Whatcom county. He states that there are tens of thousands of acres of the richest land he ever saw in that valley awaiting occupation. It is his belief that a man can make a good living there on one-fourth the land that is required in Wisconsin, and not suffer half so much with the cold. He proposes immediately to send for his family and other relatives.

The Dalles Tribune says: "J. Frazier, living near Pendleton, called on us as he went down the river the other day. He is one of the most extensive sheep raisers in Eastern Oregon, his total wool clip this season amounting to [illegible] pounds. A band of ewes numbering 1818 averaged 9½ pounds apiece. Mr. Frazier says there is money in wool at a bit a pound, in which opinion we concur. He is on his way to the Centennial at Philadelphia.

The Bedrock Democrat says: Our farmers have commenced cutting their hay, and the yield per acre is very heavy. By the time or before they are through with haying the grain harvest will commence, and for the next month or six weeks we need expect to see but few of our farmers in our city; those coming will only do so from necessity. We congratulate our farmers on their bright prospects for a bountiful harvest. All this portion of the State needs to make it the great grain producing portion is the means of quick and cheap transportation to get our surplus to market."

"BEHOLD THE KING!—Tom Baird, the carter, the bedle of my working man's church, was as noble a fellow as ever lived—God fearing, true, unselfish. I shall never forget what he said when I asked him to stand at the door of the working man's congregation, and when I thought he was unwilling to do so in his working clothes.

"If," said I, "if you don't like to do it, Tom, if you are ashamed——"

"Ashamed!" he exclaimed, as he turned round upon me, "I'm mair ashamed o' yersel', sir. Div ye think that I believe, as ye ken I do, that Jesus Christ, who died for me, was stripped o' his raiment on the cross, and that I—Na, na, I'm proud to stand at the door."

Dear good "Tom!" There he stood for seven winters, without a sixpence of pay, all from love, though at my request the working congregation gave him a silver watch.

When he was dying from smallpox, the same unselfish nature appeared. When asked if they would let me know, he replied:

"There's nae man leevin' I like as I do him. I know he would come. But he should na come on account of his wife and bairns, and so ye maunna tell him!"

I never saw him in his illness, never hearing of his danger till it was too late.

The appointment of Tyner to supersede Jewell as Postmaster-General may be explained by this passage which we find in a sketch of his life published in an Eastern paper:

In the XLIIId Congress he supported the policy of the Administration toward the South, when the force bill was before the House in the winter of 1875 voted every time it was passed upon by that body in favor of its becoming a law. He was one of the one hundred and thirty Republicans who voted in favor of retaining the thirteenth section of the bill which authorized the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus. Several of the Republican Congressmen who had not been elected to the XLIVth Congress and who voted for the force bill were afterward given offices by President Grant. Mr Tyner was then appointed to his present office and has since held the position.

A STRONG OBJECTION.—"Are you satisfied with the jury, gentlemen?" said Judge Noonan this morning, after the jury had been empanneled.

"We are," said the lawyers in chorus.

A tall juror rose up solemnly in the jury box and said impressively: "But I am not."

"What's your objection, Mr Snooks?" inquired His Honor blandly.

"This young man on my right, Your Honor, has been eating onions."

"Objection overruled; go on with the case," observed Judge Noonan, with a significant glance at the sheriff, and the tall man sat down resignedly and held a white handkerchief to his nose as a kind of signal of distress.

BUSINESS FOR THE SEASON.—A sombre-visaged boy stood on the corner of East Broad and Jersey streets yesterday. We stole softly behind him and overheard the following soliloquy: "I must manage to scoop in three Sunday school picnics. There's the First Baptist, First Presbyterian and several Methodist Sunday schools that have their turn-outs pretty soon. Then there's five or six others comin' all in a heap, sometime in August. Now something's got to be done if this duffer is agoing to git his lipper in all around. I've jest got to fly round and join about three Sunday schools a week for the next six weeks if I expect to be in any kind of condition when winter sets in."—Elizabeth (N. J.) Herald.

The mountain wind as idly blows

But for all time shall Valor's bard

WEDNESDAY MORNING AUGUST 9 1876

WHO IS TO GOVERN THE SOUTH

It would be unjust to charge that all the white people of the South or all the Democratic party encourage or countenance the massacre of the colored people. Those Republican orators and journals that make such sweeping accusations are either grossly ignorant and blindly prejudiced or they are actuated by most unworthy motives to the use of most unworthy means in the struggle between their party and the Democrats for ascendancy in the nation. There are thousands of white people in the South, thousands of Democrats, who have no sympathy with the lawless proceedings that occur at various places in that portion of the Union with such scandalous frequency. There are thousands who would no more have part or lot in such brutal crimes as the Hamburg outrage in South Carolina than they would participate in any other murder. But that these horrid crimes are committed repeatedly and by wholesale in the South is a fact which no one can gainsay and those people of the Southern States who desire to see good order maintained, the laws obeyed, the original rights of all citizens respected, and the South take its place in the march of progressive civilization, are not exempt from responsibility in these matters. They allow themselves to be overborne by a ruffian class who trample the laws under their feet with perfect impunity. They stand idly by and permit a helpless race to be trodden down and murdered by the score in cold blood for no other cause than that they are black. The perpetrators of these inhuman butcheries go unpunished when a courageous and manly effort on the part of those who deprecate their conduct would bring them to account and put a stop to their lawlessness. The arm of justice is paralyzed when with the earnest support of the orderly portion of community it would be strong to secure the rights and immunities of citizenship to every person entitled to them, no matter what might be his color or his previous condition of servitude. The Coushatta and Vicksburg and Hamburg outrages would not have occurred had the orderly people of the South, who accepted the issues of the war, resolutely set their face against all such proceedings from the first. The carpet-bagger with all his sins, would never have existed but for the fact that the native born Southerners who might have taken hold and built up their wasted country stood looking on in mute disapproval of the hideous doings of Kukluxism, and there will be no longer either necessity or excuse for Federal interference in the governments of the reconstructed States whenever the better class of people there resolve to do their duty fully and fearlessly in bringing to justice the Thugs who perpetrate these wholesale murders. Until they make up their minds to meet the evil and remedy it themselves, enforce the laws against the criminal class, to respect the rights of the colored people and see to it that others respect them there will be, and there ought to be no cessation of Federal interference. It is for the South to decide whether it will govern itself according to the Constitution and laws of the Republic, or leave that responsibility to the general government.

THE MISSISSIPPI REPORT

Mr Boutwell has presented to the Senate in the form of a report on the Mississippi elections some propositions which appear to us to be dangerous to the unity of the nation and to Republican institutions. From the evidence taken by the committee appointed to investigate that matter, the conclusion is reached that the last legislature of that State was composed to a greater or less extent of members fraudulently elected. Upon this fact it is determined that the legislature was an illegal body, that its acts are not valid, and that the State has not a republican form of government as required by the constitution. The remedy proposed is to deny the State any representation in Congress and if that does not bring the people to a sense of the obligation they are under to hold fair elections then that they be remanded to a Territorial condition to undergo such a process of education as will prepare them for a republican form of government.

No doubt there were frauds in the election in Mississippi. There have been frauds in the elections in Oregon time and again, and members have sat in our legislature who obtained their places by gross frauds. The same is true of other Western States—it is presumed all of them—and it is certain that of late years the same has been peculiarly true of the Southern States. It would be rash, therefore to deny the fact found by the Senatorial committee. But the conclusion of law based on that fact is quite another matter. Does Mr Boutwell or the rest of the majority of the committee, mean to be understood as asserting that when the constitution requires that every State shall have a republican form of government it means a government wherein no fraud is ever practised in the elections. That would be an admirable government but [illegible] such a one as does not and never did exist in any State of the Union or in any State in the world. The constitution means no such thing. It simply means that the governments of the States shall be republican as contra[illegible] from all forms of monarchy [illegible] representative and not [illegible] hereditary. The constitution [illegible] in the monarchical [illegible] and [illegible] That is the meaning of the [illegible] and all its meaning. Congress is to see that that principle is made [illegible] but there its power [illegible] that clause ends.

And then as to the proposition to deny representation in Congress to a State in which elections there is fraud, to what would such a course lead? There would scarcely be a State represented in Congress to-day under such a rule. Instead of insuring a Union of States republican in the form of their governments the rigid application of that rule would break up the Union in five years at the outside. Take Oregon for example again. Both of her Senators were elected by legislatures in which there sat members returned by fraud. This is well known. The Senate may clearly examine into the legality of the election of these members by the legislature and may admit or exclude them as shall be found proper under that examination. But shall the inquiry be carried back to the popular election by which the legislature was chosen and our Senators be excluded because the legislature [illegible] incorrectly on the election and qualification of its members. That would be considered a menace [illegible] the liberties of the State. But even that falls far short of Mr Boutwell's proposition as telegraphed. His plan is to deny the State any representation in Congress if there was fraud in the popular election. His rule would have excluded Judge Williams from Congress because their fraudulent vote cast in the election for members of the legislature in 18[illegible]. If this is thought to be too strict a construction of the language of his report, that idea will be corrected by a comparison of the Mississippi case with the case supposed for Oregon. This was a Senatorial investigation directed to the question of the legality of the election of members of the legislature of Mississippi, and upon the findings of fraud in that election is based Mr Boutwell's recommendation to exclude States thus delinquent from all representation in Congress. The Republican party can not afford to commit itself to such a doctrine and if it should do so the country could not afford to commit itself to the Republican party.

Then we have as a dernier resort in case this remedy should prove ineffectual a proposition to "remand" the offending communities back to a Territorial condition. By what warrant of the constitution can the United States Government remand a State having an elective and representative government back to the condition of a Territory? Probably no thoughtful and candid person who has given the subject much attention, will take issue with us when we say that experience has demonstrated that the work of reconstruction was pushed along entirely too fast and that the whole country and especially the South would have been better off now if the restoration of the State governments broken down by the rebellion had been postponed for a considerable period. But it is too late to reconsider the acts of reconstruction. These States are as much States in the Union as New York or Illinois, and if they can be "remanded" at the pleasure of the General Government, so can New York or Illinois or any other State. Is the country ready for that doctrine? We opine it is not. The people who poured out their blood like water to save this Union from destruction by the States acting in their several capacity, are not ready yet to have it destroyed by an edict from Congress.

WILL MR HENDRICKS EXPLAIN?

If the telegrams are to be credited Mr Hendricks is in a position to be investigated, and possibly to imitate the example of Orth, who came to the conclusion that it was not for the interest of the party for him to continue in the field as a candidate. Until the particulars are published or the dispatch has been contradicted it would, perhaps be unjust to assume the truth of the charge made against Mr Hendricks. It is not unjust however to expect him to explain at the earliest possible moment. The Democratic smellers at Washington we dare say will not be half so energetic in pursuing Hendricks as they were in the conspiracy against Blaine. Of course, Hendricks case does not come within their jurisdiction and they can shut their eyes to the charges against him in their private capacity, but if they had been really so shocked as they pretended to be at the accusations against Blaine, they ought to be equally so in the case of Hendricks and their indignation should find some expression outside their office as national smellers. But it will not. The men who seized with indecent haste upon every insinuation against Blaine, and magnified trifles into positive proof of colossal frauds, will have never a word of censure for Hendricks but on the contrary will be in the greatest hurry imaginable to repel the charge against Hendricks. We shall be glad if futher developments leave Mr Heddricks half as clean as Blaine was proved to be.

THE ENGLISH ROWERS

The English universities declined to send their representative crew to contend with our boys in the intercollegiate races at Saratoga but afterwards an independent crew was organized and sent over to this country to contend for the prize in the Centennial races on the Schuylkill. They are now rowing on that river and the correspondent of the New York Times thus speaks of them:

They do their paddling in their gig which is light and rather wide. The seats move on rollers instead of sliding on steel or bone surface as is the case with the major portion of the American built shells and light craft. Their shell of cedar is somewhat longer than the American racing craft and broader amidships. This with a single [illegible] for Mr Close comprises the stock of boats which the crew have with them. Yesterday afternoon afforded an opportunity to witness the Simon Pure English stroke upon these waters. The rowing of the visitors was very pull they at no time pulling more than twenty [illegible] to the minute but with a long reach and quick recovery. They took the water well with the blade straight and splashed [illegible] but not during their work is cleanly as the [illegible] [illegible] the party who Mr Walk[illegible] seems [illegible] [illegible]

The New York [illegible] thinks it [illegible] impossible for any [illegible] to spend more than [illegible] dollars a year [illegible] [illegible] means [illegible] [illegible] the manner in which that [illegible] allowing twenty three thousand dollars for interest on cost of houses and taxes twenty thousand for a yacht and five thousand for repairs the other items of expense amount to forty seven thousand two hundred dollars including five thousand dollars for a ball in the winter season and twenty thousand for the cost of maintaining two thousand guests. In Europe this sum would be largely increased by the very great cost of keeping up the splendid parks and fox hunting establishments maintained there and probably [illegible] [illegible] style of living [illegible] or [illegible] this estimate includes only the cost of living and not what may be expended in the purchase of pictures or in the indulgence of a taste for horse racing or other luxuries.

The Canadian yacht Countess of Dufferin started in a [illegible] race [illegible] in company with several of the yachts belonging to the New York club. The race has not yet been finished but when the several yachts had completed half the race the Idler led, followed by the Idal Wave, [illegible] and Countess of Dufferin in the order named. The Idler had then gained forty seven minutes on the Countess of Dufferin and the Idal Wave only a few seconds less. From this it would seem likely that the Madeleine which is a faster yacht than the Idler, will win the grand contest for the challenge cup which is to be sailed for by the Madeleine and Countess of Dufferin next week.

The men belonging to the Seventh Cavalry Custer's regiment which suffered so severely in the fight with Sitting Bull have forwarded a petition to Washington asking that the customary rule of promotion be disregarded and that Major Reno be made a colonel and the other officers of the regiment promoted to fill the vacancies made by the death of their comrades. They urge that the skill and bravery of these officers entitle them to this distinction.

CITY.

I O G T INSTALLATION.—The following officers of Paradise Springs Lodge I O G T near this city were publicly installed on the 8th inst by James A Smith, Esq, assisted by M Creswell of Brooklyn Lodge and C H Walker of Astoria Lodge, viz: Eugene Price W C T, Ida Francis, R H S, Viola Hosford L H S, Jennie Fields, W A S, Charles Fields, W F S, Dora Francis W T, James Prettyman, W M, Lettie Hosford W D M, Rev C O Hosford, W C, Kate Taylor W I G, Frank Gillam, W O G, and Wm Prettyman, P W C T. During the exercises of the evening Mrs. Plympton Kelly read an original production which was well received. The singing by the choir, consisting of C H Walker, Mrs Francis, Thos [illegible] and [illegible] was excellent as was also the vocal music furnished on the [illegible]. Speeches were made by James A Smith and W P Dunbar after which the large audience present marched around the tables, which during the evening had been loaded with all the excellent viands one could wish by the thoughtful mothers and sisters of that neighborhood and the order was given "help yourselves" which was obeyed without a second bidding. At a late hour the meeting adjourned and all went away well pleased with the treat so generously given by the Mount Tabor people. The Lodge was organized in April last by James H Frush Esq, and is now doing a good work.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—Mr George H Clarke, the well known merchant of this city, met with a painful accident last Sunday morning. In company with Mr Ed R Hall, Mr. Clarke left this city last week for a hunting excursion up the Columbia. Sunday forenoon they were out about 25 miles above The Dalles engaged in shooting prairie chickens. The parties had separated a short distance and were looking for game when the accident occurred. A brace of prairie chick[illegible] close to where Mr [illegible] [illegible] when that gentleman discharged his fowling piece at the game. Mr Clark was about 75 yards distant at the moment and was not exactly in the direction where the gun was [illegible]. But strange to say a number of the bird shot struck Mr Clark in different portions of the body. One shot took effect just above the left eye, inflicting a painful wound, and [illegible] ing the annihilation of the sight of that optic. The other shot penetrated only a little way through the skin, and the injury resulting is very slight. Messrs Clarke and Hall returned to the city Monday, and the [illegible] gentleman is at present confined to his house. The shot have been extracted and Mr. C will soon be around again. It is exceedingly fortunate that the accident was not more serious.

AN EXCITING SCENE.—The good people living in the neighborhood of Washington and East Park streets were suddenly startled about 6 o'clock last evening by the frightful screaming of a child and the hoarse noise of a man calling out to "Stop him! stop him!" Rushing into the street we found that a prominent Front street merchant, whose wife is "doing" the Centennial and whose residence at the place above stated is unoccupied save when the proprietor is at home, had given [illegible] after a boy thirteen or fourteen years of age whom he saw coming out of his house. He did not know at the time that the boy had really been guilty of any crime, but the circumstance was suspicious, and he gave chase, soon overtaking the urchin, who was greatly frightened. He led him back to the [illegible] to investigate whether or not everything was all right. We are not at present advised how he found matters. Much complaint is made by those of our citizens whose families are absent on the coast and other places and whose houses are left without occupants for the time being, at the wanton destruction of shrubbery, window glass, etc., by young hoodlums of the city. An [illegible] of a few of these young scrape-graces might serve as a check.

BUSY AT WORK.—We noticed [illegible] number of workmen very busily [illegible] the ruins of Smith Bros.' [illegible], and upon inquiry ascertained that the [illegible] finished their labors, and with their [illegible] teristic energy, the firm at once proceeded to make preparations for starting anew. The amount allowed by the appraisers we think stand was $9,581 a sum which is perhaps fair considering the amount of insurance carried yet a very small sum when their loss is taken into consideration, their stock of patterns alone being worth very considerably more than the amount they receive. We understand that it is the intention of the firm to procure, if possible, a location on the river front on which to rebuild their iron works and the members are at present negotiating with several parties who have suitable places for this purpose, providing terms can be agreed upon. We are sure we but reflect the sentiments of the entire community when we say the firm has our best wishes, and we [illegible] that success is a sure result where such indomitable energy and pluck is shown in the face of such a streak of misfortune as these gentlemen seem to have been in of late.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—We were the unwilling spectator the other day, of a specimen of unnecessary cruelty, practiced by a first class hoodlum driving a raw bone equine before a rickety express wagon loaded with a half dozen or more young calves. The calves were thrown into the wagon in a promiscuous heap piled on top of each other, no pains being taken to arrange and carry them off without causing the least possible pain to the innocent and harmless creatures. When one attempted to relieve its painful position the heartless driver stopped and exhibited his cruel disposition by kicking and otherwise maltreating the animal. We observed one which had been "loosely piled in," with its head and neck under its body showing the least symptoms of life, its neck evidently being disjointed. This is not the first instance of the kind we have noticed and we presume it will not be the last till some of those miserable creatures who carry the "human form divine" and [illegible] be men are made an example of by due process of law.

SANTIAM BRIDGE.—Last Monday [illegible] the first work for the new bridge across the Santiam was commenced. This proposed structure which will be of such great service to those portions of Marion and Linn counties that border on the Santiam river for a long distance on each side, is to span that stream at a point about two miles east of Jefferson on a direct line toward Scio, and near Green's ferry. As previously stated, the contract for building the bridge has been awarded to Miller & Son for the sum of $11,23[illegible] Jacob Conser will superintend the construction of the bridge. It will be a truss bridge the first span being 200 feet long and the second [illegible] supported in the center by a pier built [illegible] fashioned and filled with rock. The bridge will be a very substantial structure and built in the strongest possible manner. It will probably be completed before the rainy season begins.

WEDNESDAY MORNING AUGUST [illegible] 187[illegible]

WHO IS TO GOVERN THE SOUTH?

It would be unjust to charge that all the white people of the South or all the Democratic party encourage or countenance the massacre of the colored people. The Republican orators and journals that make such sweeping accusations are either grossly ignorant and blindly prejudiced or they are actuated by most unworthy motives to make use of most unworthy means in the struggle between their party and the Democrats for ascendancy in the nation. There are thousands of white people in the South, thousands of Democrats who have no sympathy with the lawless proceedings that occur at various places in that portion of the Union with such scandalous frequency. There are thousands who would no more have a part or lot in such brutal crimes as the Hamburg one in South Carolina than they would [illegible] in any other murder. But that these horrid crimes are committed [illegible] by wholesale in the South is a fact which no one can gainsay. And those people of the Southern States who desire to see good order maintained, the laws of even the original rights of all citizens respected, and the South take its place in the march of progressive civilization, are not exempt from responsibility in these matters. They allow themselves to be overborne by a ruffian class who trample the laws under their feet with perfect impunity. They stand idly by and permit a helpless race to be trodden down and murdered by the score in cold blood for no other cause than that they are black. The perpetrators of these inhuman butcheries go unpunished when a courageous and manly effort on the part of those who deprecate their conduct would bring them to account and put a stop to their lawless[illegible]

"Oh, girls!" I shall just die I know I—!!!" exclaimed Belle Brunette going off into a hysterical fit of laughter which she vainly tried to smother before an elegant lace handkerchief.

"What is it, you provoking thing. Why don't you tell us so we can laugh too?"

"Well—you see," she gasped at last "we've got a new pupil—the queerest looking thing you ever saw. I happened to be in [illegible] room when she arrived. She came [illegible] and had a mite of an old fashioned hair trunk not much bigger than a [illegible] and she came into Madam's room with a funny little basket in her hand and sat down as if she had come to stay forever. She said, 'Are you Madam Gazin?' 'Yes,' she [illegible], 'that is my name.' 'Well I've come to stay a year at your school.' And then she [took] a handkerchief out of her basket and unrolled it till she came to an old leather wallet, and actually took out $250 and laid it in [Madam's] hand. 'That is just the amount I believe; you will please give me a receipt for it.' You never saw Madam look so surprised. She actually didn't know what to say for a minute, but she gave her the receipt, asked a few questions, and had her taken to No 10 and there she is now this very minute."

"Well, what was there so funny about all [that]?"

"Why, [illegible] she has red hair tucked into a [illegible] net, and she looks just like a fright every way. She had on a brown delaine dress [illegible] the sign of a ruffle or trimming of any kind and the shabbiest hat and shawl [illegible] saw. You'll laugh, too when you see her."

Belle Brunette was an only child and her [wealthy] father was pleased to gratify her every whim. So beside being far too elegantly dressed for a school girl she was supplied with plenty of pocket money and being [illegible] and full of life and fun, she was the acknowledged leader among Madam's [illegible].

When the tea bell rang the new comer was [illegible] to the dining room and introduced to her schoolmates as Miss Fannie Comstock. She had exchanged her brown delaine for a [illegible] dress, with a bit of white edging [illegible]. She did look rather queer [with] her small thin freckled face and her red hair brushed straight back from her face and hidden as much as possible under a large [illegible] net, and but for the presence of Madam her [reception] would have been exceedingly [unpleasant]. She was shy and awkward and evidently ill at ease among so many [illegible]. As soon as possible she hastened [to] the seclusion of her own room. The [next] day she was examined and assigned to her place in the different classes and to the [surprise] of all she was far in advance of those of her age. But this did not awaken the respect of her schoolmates as it should have. On the contrary, Belle Brunette and her special friends were highly incensed about [it] and at once commenced a series of petty [annoyances], whenever it was safe to do so which kept poor Fannie miserable indeed although she seemed to take no notice of it. A few weeks passed by. Her lessons were always perfectly recited. She made no complaint of the slights and sneers of her companions, but kept out of their way as much as [possible]. Her thin face grew paler however, and there were dark rings about her eyes. A [careful] friend would have seen that all [these] things were wearing cruelly upon her young life. One Saturday the very spirit of [mischief] seemed to let loose among them [illegible] was away and the other teachers were in their rooms. Fannie had been out for a walk and was near the door of her room [when] a dozen or more of the girls surrounded her, clasping hands together so she was a prisoner in their midst. For a moment she begged piteously to be released but they only laughed the more, and began going around singing something which Belle had composed—cruel, miserable insulting words. She stood for an instant pale and still, then with a piercing cry, she burst the ring, and rushing into her room closed and locked the door. Through their wild peals of laughter the girls [heard] a strange groan and a heavy fall.

"I believe she has fainted," said Belle.

"What shall we do," said another.

For a moment they stood there sober enough, when one of them ran for the matron and told her that Fanny Comstock had fainted in her [room] and the door was locked.

She had a long ladder put to the window and sent the janitor to see if it was true. Fortunately the window was open and in a few moments he had unlocked the door from the inside. The girls were huddled together in a frightened group while Madam lifted the [poor] girl and laid her upon her bed. She was in violent [spasms]. The doctor was sent for but when the [illegible] ceased alarming symptoms set in, and he pronounced it a serious case of brain fever. It is impossible to tell the shame and remorse of the conscience stricken girls. They were not brave enough to confess their guilt but hung around the sick room offering their services vainly wishing they might atone for it in some way. But their presence [illegible] the poor sufferer so that they [illegible] away. Day after day passed and [illegible] in violent delirium. The little [illegible] was searched to find some clue [illegible] lies, but there was nothing [illegible] but [the] scantiest supply of clothes. Day after day the doctor came looking grave and anxious, and at last the crisis came. [For] many hours she lay as if dead, and not a word was permitted to disturb the awful silence while they waited to see if she would live or die. At last she opened her eyes, and the suspense was relieved by an [illegible] word from the doctor that with careful nursing she would soon be well again. But her convalescence was slow and [illegible].

Her former tormentors dared not [illegible] what they had done but they sent [illegible] bouquets of fragrant flowers and [illegible] delicacies to tempt her returning appetite. Her eyes would light up with surprise and pleasure at the little gifts. Amidst all her sufferings not a word of complaint of the [treatment] she had received ever escaped her lips.

One day Madam was sitting by her side and as she seemed to be much stronger she ventured to ask after her friends.

"I have no friends, Madam, only [illegible] son, who has a large family of his own, and has never cared for me. Mother died when I was born. I had a step-mother but father died five years ago and I've taken care of myself ever since."

"And you are only fifteen now?"

"Yes ma'am."

"How did you get the money to pay a year's board and tuition here?"

"I earned it all Madam, every cent. And as soon as I was big enough I went into a factory and earned [illegible] a week [illegible] $3 [illegible] I worked [illegible] nights and mornings."

"Poor child!"

"Oh no ma'am I was very [illegible]."

"But how did you keep up so well with your studies?"

[illegible] I wanted to be a teacher some time and I [illegible] a better [illegible] here than anywhere [illegible] it."

"What are your plans for the [illegible]?"

"I must go back to the factory and earn enough to get some [illegible] for the winter. [illegible] to dress better."

Madam's heart was full. She bent over the white thin little face and kissed it [illegible] silently.

That evening when the pupils gathered in the chapel for worship she told Fannie's story. [illegible] the moment Madam finished Belle Brunette sprang up with the tears pouring down her cheeks.

"Oh Madam! We have been awful cruel and wicked to that poor girl. We have made fun of her from the first and she would never have been sick as she was if we had not tormented her almost to death. I am most to blame as it was I that led on the rest, and we have suffered terribly all these weeks fearing she might die. You may expel me or punish me in any way you please for I deserve it and I shall go down on my knees and ask her pardon just as soon as you will let me see her."

"My child I am shocked to hear this. I can scarcely believe that any of my pupils would ill treat a companion because she was unfortunate as to be plain and poor. But you have made a noble confession and I forgive you as freely as I believe she will when she shows how truly you have repented of your unkindness." By degrees as she was able to bear it one after another went to Fannie and begged her forgiveness which was freely granted. She said, "I don't wonder you made fun of me. I know I was poorly dressed, and awful homely. I would have pulled every hair out of my head long ago only I knew it would grow out as red as ever. But oh, if I could have felt that I had just one friend among you I could have borne it but somehow it just broke my heart to have you all turn against me."

After this she gained rapidly and one fine morning the doctor said she might join the girls in the drawing room for an hour before tea. There had been a vast deal of whispering and hurrying to and fro of late among the girls of which Fannie had been totally unconscious in the quiet seclusion of her room. At the appointed time Madam herself came to assist her and leaning upon her strong arm the young girl walked feebly through the long hall and down the stairs.

"My dear the girls have planned a little surprise for you to make the hour as pleasant as possible."

She opened the door and seated Fannie in an easy chair and the girls came gliding in with smiling faces singing a beautiful song of welcome. At its close Belle Brunette approached and placed a beautiful wreath of flowers upon her head saying, "Dear Fannie we crown you our queen to day knowing well how far above us all you are in His sight who looketh upon the heart instead of the outward appearance. You have taught us a lesson we shall never forget and we beg you to accept a token of sincere love and repentance for our treatment of you in the past which you will find in your room on your return."

Fannie's eyes were full of tears and she tried to say a word in reply but Madam spoke for her and after another song they followed their new crowned queen to the dining room where the most tempting feast was laid in honor of the occasion. Fannie was quietly tearfully happy through it all yet so wearied with the unusual excitement that Madam said that she must not see the girls' "Peace Offering" that night. The first thing she saw the next morning was a fine large trunk and lying upon it a card, "For Miss Fannie Comstock from her teacher and schoolmates." Having noticed it she saw it was packed full of newly folded garments but she had no time to examine the contents until after breakfast when they left her alone with her wonderful gifts. There were pretty dresses and sacques and a fine new parasol gloves and ribbons cuffs and collars in abundance—indeed everything that a young school girl could possibly need. Every one of Madam's 210 pupils had contributed from their choicest and best to furnish a complete outfit for their less favored mate. At the bottom was a well filled writing desk and an album containing all their pictures and a pretty purse containing $50 and the following note from Madam:

My Dear Child This shall be a receipt in full for all expenses during whatever time you may choose to remain in the seminary which I present to you as a sincere token of my love and respect. JEANETTE GAZIN

They found her at dinner time on the floor surrounded by her new treasures crying like a baby but it did her good. She was soon able to resume her studies and was ever after ward treated with kindness and consideration even though all her hair came out and left her head bald as her face so she had to wear a queer cap like wig for many weeks. When the long vacation arrived Belle carried her off to her beautiful home on the Hudson where for the first time in her life she was surrounded by beauty and luxury on every side and was treated as a loved and honored guest. It was not long before the hateful wig was cast aside and Fanny's head was covered with a profusion of dark auburn curls which were indeed a crown of glory that made her plain face most beautiful.

Gentle loving and beloved by all she remained in the seminary until she graduated with honor after which Madam offered her the position of head teacher with a most liberal salary which she gratefully accepted.

AGUE MIXTU[RE]

A CERTAIN AND EFFECTUAL REM[EDY]

FOR

Fever and Ague, Inter[mittent] and Remittent Fevers, &c.

This class of diseases so common in all [illegible] of the World, and especially prevalent in [illegible] larious districts and vicinage of water-co[urses] are almost invariably accompanied by [illegible] less derangement of the liver and fre[quently] by a defective action of the digestive [illegible]

The mere breaking of the Chill is but a[illegible] towards completing a radical cure, the [illegible] organs of the body, especially the stomach [and] liver must be brought to a healthy and [illegible] ous condition before a permanent cure can [be] established, and this fact has been [illegible] kept in view by Dr Jayne in his [illegible] these complaints. The use of Jayne's [Ague] Mixture, in conjunction with Jayne's S[anative] Pills as prescribed in the Directions [which] accompany each bottle, will not only

but restore the system, more particu[larly the] liver and stomach, to a sound condition, [and] prevent a relapse of Fever and Ague by [thor]oughly and the best evidence of this is the [illegible] suc[cess] which has always followed the ad[min]istration of these remedies, as attest [illegible] certificates published annually in Dr. Ja[yne's] Almanac, and the wide spread po[pularity of the] Ague Mixture in those districts of the [United] States, where the diseases, for which [it is] adapted, most prevail.

ERADICATING THE DISEA[SE]

YOUNG ME[N]

Who may be suffering from the effects of [illegible] ful follies or indiscretion [illegible] themselves of this the greatest boon ever [illegible] at the altar of suffering humanity [illegible] NEY will guarantee to forfeit $500 for [every] case of seminal weakness or private disease of any kind or character which he undertakes and fails to cure. He would therefore [say to] the unfortunate sufferer who may read this [notice] that you are treading upon dangerous ground when you longer delay in seeking the proper remedy for your complaint. You may be in the first stage, remember you are approaching the last. If you are bordering on the last and are suffering some or all of its effects remember that if you persist in procrastination the time must come when the most skillful physician can render you no assistance; when the door of hope will be closed [illegible] when no angel of mercy can bring you [relief]. In no case has the Doctor failed of success. Then let not despair work upon [your] imagination but avail yourself the beneficial results of his treatment before your case is beyond the reach of medical skill or before grim death hurries you to a premature grave. Full course of treatment $25 00. Send money by Post Office order or Express with full description of the case. Call and see.
